Laboratory Procedures
For long term storage, we suggest that N-ethylamphetamine (EMA) (hydrochloride) (exempt preparation) be stored as supplied at -20°C. It should be stable for at least two years.

EMA (hydrochloride) (exempt preparation) is supplied as a solution in methanol. To change the solvent, simply evaporate the methanol under a gentle stream of nitrogen and immediately add the solvent of choice. Solvents such as ethanol, DMSO, and dimethyl formamide purged with an inert gas can be used. The solubility of EMA (hydrochloride) (exempt preparation) in these solvents is approximately 20, 5, and 3 mg/ml, respectively.

Further dilutions of the stock solution into aqueous buffers or isotonic saline should be made prior to performing biological experiments. Ensure that the residual amount of organic solvent is insignificant, since organic solvents may have physiological effects at low concentrations. If an organic solvent-free solution of EMA (hydrochloride) (exempt preparation) is needed, it can be prepared by evaporating the methanol and directly dissolving the neat drug in aqueous buffers. The solubility of EMA (hydrochloride) (exempt preparation) in PBS, pH 7.2, is approximately 5 mg/ml. We do not recommend storing the aqueous solution for more than one day.

EMA is an N-substituted amphetamine with an ethyl group on the amphetamine backbone. As a stimulant drug of the phenethylamine and amphetamine chemical classes, it is widely known as an anorectic marketed under the tradename Apetinil™. EMA has been abused as a “designer drug” alternative to amphetamine and possibly methamphetamine. This product is intended for forensic or research purposes.
